Ann Allred of Pendleton: Her Will (1637) and Her Probate Inventory Record (1638)

by John Allred, Dublin, Ohio

Cleveland R., William R., Coleman S., Samuel, Elias, Thomas

Cameras were not available in the 17th Century so we do not have a picture of Ann Allred of Pendleton. But, thanks to the British penchant for record keeping, we have a snapshot of her life. Her will and probate inventory record were among hundreds of thousands of items housed in the Record's Office in Preston, Lancashire, England. Visitors to the Records Office will find a treasure of historical documents. All that is necessary is to sign in and obtain a Reader's Ticket and begin the search.

Our search quickly turned up a book listing wills from 1637. The index of that book showed the name "Ann Alred of Pendleton." Since it has been well established that John Allred, the father of the first immigrant to America, Solomon Allred, was from Pendleton, Eccles Parish, Lancashire, it seemed likely that she must be in our ancestral line. continued on page 2

A cursory examination of the will confirmed that this particular Ann Allred was very likely an ancestor of Solomon. A cursory reading was all that was possible, however. Even though the will was written in Early Modern English, a cursive script was used which, for the most part, is unrecognizable to the untrained eye today. The original will, which was written on a rather thick paper, much like blotter paper, was photographed in the Preston Library.

The will on page 3 was transcribed by Dr. Leslie Lockett¹ of Ohio State University.

The will, written on December 13, 1637, gives us a lot of information. It tells us that Ann “Alred” (Allred) was a widow from the small village of Pendleton in the Parish of Eccles (rhymes with “heckles”) in the County of Lancaster or, as the English say, Lancashire. We know from other information² that Ann Taylor (Tailor) was born about 1572 and that she and John Allred of Pendleton were married at the Parish Church, Eccles, Lancashire on May 27, 1589. While there has been some confusion as to the spelling of Ann’s maiden name (Taylor or Tailor), it is interesting that one of the witnesses to the will was Isach Taylor who was probably a relative of Ann's, perhaps her brother. This would suggest that the correct spelling is Taylor but Isach Taylor, like Ann, was unable to write his name and signed with his mark.

The will makes clear also, at the time of it's writing, she was a widow with five living children: three girls and two boys. The girls were all married. The first mentioned and the oldest daughter, Ann (b. 1596), was married to John Travis (Trauis) on February 19, 1621 in Saint Mary the Virgin Church, Eccles Parish. A second daughter, Elizabeth (b. January 13, 1604), was married to Adam Bradshaw on May 19, 1632. The third daughter whose name appears to be Cataran Ouldham was actually named Catherine

(b. August 29, 1602) which was badly misspelled by the scribe. The Eccles Parish Church records show that a Katheryne Ouldham was buried in the church yard on January 15, 1647. Unfortunately, as noted above, any mistakes on spelling of names could probably not be corrected by Ann Allred, as evidenced by her signing the document using "her mark." The girls were each given one shilling.

The sons are named William and John. In fact, William may have felt he had been surrounded by men named John Allred for his whole life. His grandfather and his father were both named John Allred and his younger brother was also named John.

This document was also transcribed by Dr. Leslie Lockett, Ohio State University.

As was customary at the time, William (b. September 29, 1594³), being the oldest son, was given all of Ann Allred's worldly goods with the exception of the three shillings left to the three girls. Ann admonished William to share with his brother John (b. Jan 10, 1607) "in his discretion as he thinks fit." There is no record available to let us know how much he shared. We do have a record of the property that William inherited. An accounting was made, dated October 25, 1638 (only three days after Ann Allred's burial) and submitted at probate with another copy⁴ of the original will.

The grounds of St. Mary the Virgin, the Eccles Parish Church, is where Ann Allred and many other Allreds were buried.

The value of her personal possessions is recorded in pounds (li), shillings (s) and pence (d). Note that there are 20 shillings per pound and 12 pence per shilling. In today's money, using the price index, the value of her property would be about 3,200 pounds or about $4,800. She wasn't rich. The most expensive item in her personal property was "corn" "in the barne (barn)" and "one (on) the ground in the hay field," worth a total of 14 pounds or about half of the value of her worldly goods. The word "corn" didn't mean what it means today. In fact, at the time of the will, corn as we know it probably was not grown at all in England but rather corn was a "new" grain introduced to the Pilgrims by the Native Americans in Massachusetts after the Pilgrim's arrival in 1620. To the English, the word "corn" was used to describe any grain⁶ dating back to the 10th century so when the pilgrims said "Indian corn" they were actually saying "Indian grain." The "corn" listed in Ann's will was most likely wheat or barley.

Ann Allred's brass pots and pans were obviously prized possessions. They were worth considerably more than all of her "iron ware" which was undoubtedly used for cooking over an open fire, most likely in the middle of the room.⁷ To aid in cooking and serving, she had "treen" (i.e. wooden⁸) and "earthen vessels," valued at 10 shillings. She had a "kneding trough" which was used to knead bread dough⁹ and a spinning wheel for making thread from which cloth was produced. She must have done that well because "hir (her) apparel" was valued at one pound!

Another indicator of how they lived was the item listed in the inventory as a "chaf bed" which was a mattress cover filled with straw (chaff) to make a straw bed. It is not clear what "fire and fodder" means unless it is wood for cooking and heating fires and fodder to feed animals. Most of the other items - chests, stools, table, linens and wool - would have been familiar possessions in the American frontier well into the nineteenth century. Cheares (chairs) and quishens (cushions) would have also been familiar except for the spelling.

It is apparent from the list of personal property, Ann Allred's family were poor farmers as most people were at the time. In 17th century England, a farmer who owned his land was called a yeoman and was such a rarity that the man was identified by the word "yeoman" attached to church burial, marriage or parenting records and to legal documents. Neither Ann's husband's (John Allred) burial record, dated March 20, 1632, nor his probate inventory record, dated¹⁰ March 26, 1633, describe him as a yeoman. It is therefore safe to assume that the family was tenant farmers, sometimes called "cottagers" because they lived in cottages on the land owner's property.

Ann was obviously a very devout Christian who wanted to "commit my sowle (soul) into the hands of God" and stated her desire to be buried in the Eccles Parish Church yard. The Parish church was and still is Saint Mary the Virgin Church located on Church Street in what is now the city of Salford (although the Parish has many other churches now). She got her wish. Her burial was noted in the Eccles Parish Church records as simply: Ann Allred, widow, October 23, 1638.

Our story might appropriately end at this point but there is more which connects us and our heritage to Ann Allred. The man who presided over Ann Allred's funeral was John Jones, D.D., who served as vicar¹¹ of the Eccles Parish Church from 1610 to 1659 during perhaps the most tumultuous time in British history. Although John Jones contributed money to King Charles I when it was asked of the clergy, he was a Puritan. Recall that it was the Puritans, led by Oliver Cromwell, who took over the country from 1642 to 1659. John Jones, as early as 1622, was reported to ignore Church of England procedures¹² when he "gave communion to those who sat; and though nobody stood at the creed or bowed at the name of Jesus, no presentments were made," meaning that he did not report any misbehavior of the congregation. It is not surprising then that he embraced Presbyterianism when it was established as the official church in England by the Puritans. The upheaval in governance ended in 1659 returning the Church of England to its prior status under the monarchy. That also ended the tenure of John Jones, Puritan, as vicar of the Eccles Parish Church. While it is uncertain why John Jones left his office as vicar, it is known that his son, Edmund Jones, replaced him. Edmund Jones did not last long in that position – he was ejected from the Church in 1662 for "non-conformity." That term was used to describe clergy who refused to comply with the Act of Uniformity passed by Parliament on August 24, 1662 after the restoration of Charles II as King¹³. The act required clergy to consent to the entire contents of the Book of Common Prayer which was the order of worship demanded by the Church of England. Edmund chose not to continue his ministry in the Church of England but rather to join the Presbyterians, following in his father's footsteps. This is the same Edmund Jones who led an illegal Presbyterian meeting on October 12, 1673 which listed a John Allred as a participant, along with 45 other members of Reverend Edmund Jones' Presbyterian congregation.¹⁴

This Presbyterian John Allred was related to Ann Allred but it is not clear which John Allred he was. That is, he could have been Ann's son or grandson: the will shows that Ann had a son named John and we know that she had one and perhaps two grandsons named John.¹⁵ Thus there are numerous suspects named John Allred, but at this point it seems unlikely that the Presbyterian John Allred was our ancestor, the father of Solomon. That John, the husband of Ellen Pemberton Allred, was arrested over a decade earlier on June 16, 1661 for attending a Quaker meeting¹⁶. The same source shows that Ellen Allred had been arrested for attending a Quaker meeting the previous year on February 10, 1660. We also know that Ellen Pemberton Allred died a Quaker¹⁷ on December 21, 1684, and that on January 16, 1686, William Penn told James Harrison in a letter¹⁸ that he was considering helping John Allred of Pendleton to come to America as an indentured servant, which strongly implies that John Allred was still considered a Quaker. Thus, the evidence of John (and Ellen) Allred's Quakerism throughout their adult life would seem to make it unlikely that he was the Presbyterian of 1673. To have gone back and forth between Quakerism and Presbyterianism would have been unthinkable because the two sect's theological positions were, at the time, almost the exact opposite.¹⁹

Regardless of which descendent it was who joined the Presbyterians, it is clear that the Eccles Parish church yard, and the adjacent church, were no longer the peaceful place to spend eternity that Ann Allred envisioned in her will. Rather, her descendents – our ancestors – went through years of turmoil trying to find their own “true religion.” Their search, which got them labeled as “non-conformists,” had a huge price in economic and social terms and even cost some of them prison time. Eventually, it led at least one of them, Solomon Allred, to come to America, presumably looking for religious freedom and prosperity that had escaped most of his family in England.

My Allred line is: Mother: Frances Evaline Ritter Brown (1885-1937), Grandmother, Polly Ann Allred (1859-1950), Grandfather: George Willoughby Ritter (1854-1927). Some genealogist records show my grandfather as George William. This is incorrect. Great Grandfather: Nathan Allred (1811-1900) I would be happy to furnish my mother's sisters and brothers names, birth dates, etc., if requested.

I have enjoyed our information on Ellen Pemberton Allred. My husband's grandmother was a Pemberton.

Allred DNA Project

John Allred of Dublin, Ohio is the new coordinator and manager of the Allred DNA Project. John has spent a lot of time studying the Allred DNA results and has become fascinated with how all of the members of the Allred family in America and England match, how closely they match, and what it all means. His background in biochemistry is an added plus.

John is also the author of the article in this newsletter, Ann Allred of Pendleton (pages 1-7). He is also working closely with other AFO members to analyze other documents and information uncovered during last year's research trip to England.

John's contact information is:

Pemberton and Coke

I'll Have A Coca-Cola Please!

by: Linda Allred Cooper

(John S., John C., John, Joseph, Israel, Israel, Phineas, Ralph Pemberton who was first cousin of Ellen Pemberton Allred)

How many of you enjoy an ice cold coke on a hot summer day – or anytime? Did you know one of your cousins created it?

That's right – now we have another "claim to fame." The inventor of Coca-Cola was Dr. John Stith Pemberton, a direct descendant of Ralph Pemberton who was raised with his beloved first cousin, Ellen Pemberton (1638-1684) who later married John Allred (c.1635-c.1700).

Born in Knoxville, then the county seat of rural Crawford County, Georgia, John Stith Pemberton's family moved to Rome, Georgia, while he was a young child. After attending college in Macon, Georgia, Pemberton moved to Columbus, where he began importing ingredients to create herbal remedies. To ensure the ingredients he used were as labeled, he became one of the first importers to test the quality of his purchases.

His business pursuits were interrupted by the Civil War during which time he served in the 3rd Georgia Cavalry Battalion. Following the war, Pemberton returned to Columbus where his business began growing in multiple directions: First by his successful formulations of herbal remedies which led to the purchase of interests in drug stores including Jacob's Pharmacy in Atlanta.

Second, other importers, anxious to have their incoming goods tested, went to Pemberton's lab for testing. Some of the methodology he pioneered in product testing is still in use today.

In 1869, the J. S. Pemberton Company moved its laboratory to Atlanta. Pemberton followed his company, moving from Columbus to Atlanta himself in 1870. Through the years Pemberton became highly respected in Atlanta. He served on the board of Atlanta Medical College, now a part of Emory University, had a thriving pharmacy business and ran a testing laboratory.

Although an exact diagnosis cannot be made, during his time in Atlanta, Pemberton began to have medical problems. One theory is that he suffered from a gastro-intestinal disease. Another theory is his illness began when he was wounded in the Battle of Columbus, Georgia, in April 1865. Whatever the reason for his illness, he used his talents as a pharmacist to search for a cure by experimenting with coca and coca wines, eventually creating his own version of Vin Mariani, containing kola nut and damiana, which he called Pemberton's French Wine Coca. This new medicinal concoction was advertised as being particularly beneficial for "ladies, and all those whose sedentary employment causes nervous prostration, irregularities of the stomach, bowels and kidneys, who require a nerve tonic and a pure, delightful diffusible stimulant." Atlanta outlawed the sale of alcohol in 1885 (early prohibition), so Pemberton made some changes to his formula to make it legal to sell under the new law.

Working from a home laboratory on the corner of Marietta Street and Peachtree Street, Pemberton blended coca extract with cola nuts, sorghum and other ingredients to create the sweet brown syrup. The original formula allegedly called for 8.46 mg of cocaine and the effects of the coca leaf were greatly compounded by the presence of caffeine from the kola nut. Coca-Cola was originally advertised as a cure for morphine and opium addictions among a multitude of other health benefits.

John Stith Pemberton

Pemberton would send samples of the syrup to Willis Venable, who leased the bottom floor of Jacob's Pharmacy, to be mixed with soda water and tasted. Venable began serving the mixture to customers on May 8, 1886. Pemberton's bookkeeper, Frank Robinson, named the mixture Coca-Cola, and wrote it out in his distinct script. To this day, Coca-Cola is written the same way.

Dr. Pemberton never realized the potential of the beverage he created. He gradually sold portions of his business to various partners and, just prior to his death in 1888, sold his remaining interest in Coca-Cola® to Asa G. Candler, the Atlanta business man who marketed and promoted the Coca-Cola business to international fame.

Two Books Available from the Rocky Mountain Allreds

Isaac Allred: Son of James and Elizabeth Allred

The second edition biography of Isaac Allred, Son of James and Elizabeth Allred, 1813-1859, is available for shipping in mid-December. This volume is basically the same as the first edition but contains fewer pages.

The family group sheets have been eliminated from this printed version. This saved huge printing costs as well as mailing for the book. The book weighs less and is easier to handle than the volume published in 2009. However, there is a pocket in the cover of the second edition that contains a CD. The family group sheets are on this CD.

Because there are fewer pages, the price is reduced. The price is $57.00 for the book and $5.00 for shipping.

The book has the history of Isaac Allred, his family and his children. There are photos of various family members.

He played the violin and it has been passed to various family members over the years and it is still played today. by descendant Linda Green Isom

Missionary Diary: Companion to the Isaac Allred Book

The book on Isaac Allred, son of James and Elizabeth Warren Allred, highlights some of his missionary diary. Isaac Allred served Mormon missions to Central Missouri: December 12, 1837, to March 18, 1838; Southern Illinois and Western Kentucky: June 11, 1838, to September 29, 1838, and Northeastern Missouri, October 26, 1842, to November 25, 1842. He served a fourth mission to England, but no diary has been found.

Each page of the diary was photographed and digitally enhanced. There is also a transcription of what he wrote. Period maps of Missouri and Kentucky are highlighted in this volume.

The book is $22.00 plus $5 shipping and handling.

Book Sales Information

Please send checks for either or both books made payable to the Rocky Mountain Allreds to Larry C. Allred, 447 North 200 East, Farmington, UT 84025. The price for the Isaac Allred book is $57, plus $5 shipping. The price for the missionary diary is $22 plus $5 for shipping.

2010 Financial Health of the AFO

from Joyce Allred, Treasurer

The Allred Family Organization once again managed to end the year in the black despite another loss of income from membership. Glancing at the Year End Financial Report below for 2010 you can see that our income is primarily derived from memberships ($6205). We also received $298 in voluntary donations, $95 from sales of newsletter CDs and $8 interest.

Our primary expenses are in communication. We financially support the AFO Web site managed by Linda Allred Cooper ($334) and the AFO Newsletter produced by Alice Allred Pottmyer ($2997, printing and mailing).

We all need to help AFO in 2011 by keeping our AFO membership current thus eliminating the need for our Treasurer to send out renewal reminders. This will reduce the cost of having postcards reproduced and mailed.

How do I know if my AFO membership has expired or is about to expire? You can check the mailing label on this newsletter for your expiration date. Don't miss a single issue of the AFO newsletter.

Send in your renewal today!

Our 2010 income from memberships is well below the budgeted amount of $7200 because our membership dropped for the second straight year. This is undoubtedly due to the recession as a few members have indicated they will be unable to renew. Approximately 75 others have not renewed as this article is being written (despite receiving reminders in the mail). Additionally, a few members passed away during the year.

There was a major AFO funded research trip to England in 2010. We were able to fund the entire $7,506 from our escrowed research funds. Expect significant information to be reported in future publications of our newsletter.
