This Zoom Meeting and Handout is a quick overview of the History of the Allred Family starting with why Solomon Allred (born 1680 Lancashire), his parents’ Religious Persecution and why left England to become the first immigrant Ancestor of most Allreds living in America. Research Reports containing more detailed information can be found on my website where more content and new research is added as quick as possible.

My goal is to inspire more interest in our Allred Family History and Genealogy, to encourage everyone to share their own Allred family history and, hopefully, answer some questions about our ancestors.

1. Welcome and Introductions
2. Why did Ancestors of the American Allreds leave England?
3. Pennsylvania / Maryland
4. North Carolina
5. And they spread across America
Our American Allred story begins with John Allred and his wife Ellen Pemberton who were born and raised in Lancashire, England.¹

By tradition and church doctrine, babies were baptized as soon as possible, generally within a few days or weeks of birth. The baptism records give us a general idea of when John and Ellen were born and tells us their parents were members of the Church of England.

John grew up to become a “Woolen Weaver”². A talented weaver who could quickly incorporate intricate designs and/or colors into the cloth could make a very comfortable living. The Pembertons were prosperous Merchants.³ Although Class distinctions were the strictly followed in England and John Allred may not have been on the same financial level as the Pembertons, he was a hard working man and the Pembertons obviously approved of the marriage.

The Pembertons were among the very first converts to the new Quaker religion founded by George Fox in 1647. The Church of England was the only recognized and sanctioned church in

¹ John and Ellen’s Baptisms were recorded in the Parish Records of Eccles Parish Church (St. Mary the Virgin) recorded in Manchester, England, Church of England Baptisms, Marriages and Burials, 1541-1812 online at ancestry.com
² John’s profession “Woolen Weaver” was mentioned in the 1664/5 Petition of the Overseer of the Poor in Moston, Lancashire Quarter Sessions, Petitions, QSP/258/15
³ Phineas and Ralph Pemberton discussed business in many of the letters they sent to each other, friends and associates. These letters are housed in the Pemberton Collection, Pennsylvania Historical Society, Philadelphia, PA
England and all English citizens were expected to attend church services, abide by church doctrine and, maybe most important, tithe. This money went into the church coffers (bank account) and a large portion eventually wound up in the hands of the King who was the supreme governor of the Church of England is the titular head of the Church of England. As the Quaker Church grew and more and more converts quit attending Church of England services and tithing, the Church of England and King grew more and more concerned. Some differences between the Church of England and Quakers that caused conflict:

- Quakers believed God could speak to all people without the need to go to the local Priest or pray to Saints. If you are still and quiet, you can hear God talking to you.
- Quakers believed women and men were equal and both were capable and encouraged to be leaders in the faith. All Priests and leaders of the Church of England were men and women were regulated to minor roles and/or became Nuns.
- Quakers believed in tithing but all money went to help those in need, sometimes immediately distributed during church services (meetings). As stated above, tithes collected by the Church of England went into church coffers and into the hands of the King who might distribute it to the poor as they deemed appropriate.
- Quakers answered only to God and refused to swear an oath in court. They also refused to doff their hats or bow when officials or royalty were present as they considered all men equal.

As the Quaker conversions grew, persecution began and quickly intensified. Quakers were endanger of being arrested, stoned, property possessed, sentenced to jail and in some extreme cases maimed and killed. John and Ellen were arrested on June 16, 1661 and jailed in Lancaster Castle. Being sent to a castle doesn’t sound so bad until you realize Lancaster Castle was a prison – not a fairy tale castle. It was originally built as a military fort and operated as Her Majesty’s Prison until 2011. Cells were dark (no windows), damp, horrible hygiene and poor food supplies. Looking at the baptismal records for John and Ellen’s children leads me to believe she may have been pregnant and possibly given birth at least once during several arrests and jail terms.

Let me clarify: Ellen was a devout Quaker. Letters sent to and from the Pembertons and Meeting Minutes recorded for East Hardshaw Monthly Meeting prove Ellen was devoted to her faith and active in the Quaker church. John attended some Quaker Meetings, evidenced by his arrest in 1661, but all of their children were baptised at St. Mary the Virgin, Eccles Parish Church proving John remained a member of the Church of England. At least one parent had to be a church member if the baby was to be baptised. John’s death was recorded in Eccles Parish records. Ellen’s death was recorded in East Hardshaw Monthly Meeting records. All of this tells us John remained Anglican while Ellen was a faithful Quaker.

As if being arrested and jailed was not bad enough, word spread that the John Allred family were Quakers. No one wanted those awful Quakers living near them. Few wanted to do business with a Quaker. Pemberton family records and letters along with British Poor House records document how John and Ellen were forced to leave their home, move all of the weaving equipment, household furniture and children many times between 1661 – 1700.7

Each time the family was forced to move, John lost more business and quickly was forced to petition the Poor House (Church Relief) for financial help. They were impoverished. A letter written in 1678 by Phineas Pemberton to his father, Ralph, tells how “very begerly” John had come to Phineas home asking for help.8

By 1680, King Charles II was looking for a way to rid himself and England of the Quakers. His biggest problem was Quaker leader William Penn whose father, Admiral Sir William Penn, was one of the wealthiest men in England and a financial supporter of the King. Although I’m sure King Charles probably preferred to simply execute William Penn and the Quakers, he couldn’t risk making his favorite and best supporter angry. Instead he came up with the ingenious idea to give William Penn a new Colony in America in exchange for leaving England. The paper work was signed January 5, 1681, the colony named Pennsylvania, and Penn immediately started buying/building ships to carry his Quaker flock to America. The Pemberton family sailed in the fall of 1682.

John and Ellen remained in England where they died; Ellen in 1684 and John in 1701.

Their youngest son, Solomon, sailed to America.

You are probably asking How Do We Know Solomon Allred was John and Ellen’s son and that he came to America? Documentation! Remember the Pembertons were among the first Quakers and their letters prove they were friends with William Penn, George Fox and other leaders of the Quaker church.\(^\text{12}\) Ellen was an active member of the church and, as such, she and John would have also known these leaders.

After the Pembertons sailed to America in 1682, John struggled to support his family especially after Ellen’s death in 1684.\(^\text{13}\) When she died, John was left with a large family including youngest child Solomon who was only 4 years old. William Penn wrote a letter to James Harrison on January 16, 1686/7 in which he stated John Allred had come to see him and asked for help to pay ship’s passage to America.\(^\text{14}\) Penn had previously published (advertised) an offer to help Quakers leave England and sail to America in exchange for them becoming Indentured Servants. By approaching Penn, John was offering to indenture himself and his family in exchange for ship’s passage to America.

Despite approaching Penn for help, John and his family remained in England. Per a letter John wrote in 1695, he wanted to leave England earlier, but his mother was sick and he did not want to leave her. Instead of sailing to America, he chose to remain in England to care for his mother. However, now that his mother had died, he was once again ready to sail to America with his new wife and 3 sons, Owen, Theophilus and Solomon.

Sadly, John never left England. As you saw earlier, he died and was buried in the graveyard of St. Mary the Virgin, Eccles Parish Church, Lancashire. Additional parish records show John’s sons, Owen and Theophilus, married and remained in England, but Solomon disappears from British records after his father’s death.

Solomon reappears in Chester County, Pennsylvania in 1719/20 when he wrote to Israel Pemberton asking for help purchasing a tract of land.15

In 1724 and 1730 Solomon is listed as a land owner on tax lists for West Nottingham.

The family began moving south after 1730.

  \item Court records of Chester County, PA and Prince George’s County, Maryland prove Samuel Finley died 1737 leaving his entire estate to Johnny Aldred (also listed as John Alred and John Allred).\textsuperscript{17} Johnny Aldred was a minor (under age 21) and no mother was mentioned although subsequent court records prove Samuel Finley was his father. Why did Johnny Aldred have a different surname – Allred instead of Finley? When an illegitimate child was born, that child was given the mother’s surname even if the father was known. Y-Chromosome DNA test results of John Allred (died 1792 Randolph County, NC) prove he descended from a Finley man. • In 1746, William Allred purchased 3 tracts of land in Prince George’s County, Maryland. These 3 tracts had originally been part of a large tract called Piles Delight. William combined them and called them Allred’s Purchase. A survey for Piles Delight allows us to see where Allred’s Purchase was located. If you rotate the survey drawing so it is oriented North-South, you can see how it fits perfectly into a curve in the Potomac River in Prince George’s County, Maryland.

• Jeremiah York, who was listed with Solomon Allred in Chester County, PA Tax Lists, owned a tract of land called Terrapin Neck located just across the Potomac River from William Allred’s land.

On today’s map (Google Earth) you can see where Allred’s Purchase was located – just across the Potomac River from Jeremiah York’s land, Terrapin Neck. Note the river was the state line. Jeremiah York’s land was located in Frederick County, Virginia. William Allred’s land was located in Prince George’s County, Maryland. Today, William’s land is located in Washington County, Maryland.

The Allreds moved south from Pennsylvania and Maryland into North Carolina following The Great Wagon Road. The heavily traveled Great Wagon Road was the primary route for the early settlement of the Southern Colonies. It began as an animal migration and Indian (Native American) Trading Path. Pioneers began using it because of the relative safety (friendly natives) and growing ease of travel. The trail widened and became easier to travel as more and more migrants moved south.²⁰

The Great Wagon Road

The red stars indicate where the Allreds lived. Comparing the maps it is easy to see how the Allreds traveled along the Great Wagon Road into North Carolina. They begin showing up in North Carolina records in 1752.\textsuperscript{21}

Pulling together all of the information, we were able to determine who the Allred men were and how they were related. Circumstantial evidence leads most researchers to believe Solomon Allred (born 1680 England) was married to Jeremiah York’s sister, Anne, which could explain why the two families traveled together from Pennsylvania to North Carolina.

\textsuperscript{21} Solomon Allred’s grant: Anson/Bladen County land records [abstract], NC Genealogy Library, Raleigh, NC; John, Solomon, William Allred and Jeremiah York land is listed in Orange County Records, Vol. V, Granville Proprietary Land Office, Deeds and Surveys, 1752-1760 edited by William D. Bennett, C. G., on file in the Genealogy Room of the NC State Archives, Raleigh, NC and The Granville District of North Carolina 1748-1763, Abstracts of Land Grants, Volume Two written by Margaret M. Hofmann; and NC Archives land grant records
The land records agree with the men listed on the 1755 Tax List for Orange County, NC.

Why is their land listed in Orange County, NC instead of Randolph County where you’ve always heard they lived? Because Randolph County was not created until 1778. The maps below allow you to see how Orange County once covered a large section of central North Carolina but by 1778 it had been divided to form several small counties including Randolph.22

22 https://www.mapofus.org/northcarolina/
The Allreds and Yorks settled on land located in what became northeast Randolph County, North Carolina.
By the late 1700’s, some of the Allreds were on the move again. The 1790 Federal Census shows although most Allreds still lived in Randolph County, NC, some had spread to other counties and states.

1790 Federal Census:
19 Allreds Listed

12 Randolph County, NC
3 Richmond County, NC
1 Montgomery County, NC
1 Pendleton District, South Carolina
1 Barnstable County, Massachusetts
1 Allegheny County, Pennsylvania

Note the men/families living in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. Who were they? Did they descend from unknown sons or grandsons of Solomon Allred who stayed behind when the family moved south? Or are they descended from other Allred families who traveled to America from England? More research is needed to determine these answers.
Back to the North Carolina Allreds, why would some of them leave Randolph County? By tradition and the British Law of Primogeniture, the oldest son usually inherited the father’s land leaving the rest of the family to find their own way in life. Land in what became Randolph County was already owned, no more land was available, meaning the only way to own your own tract was to buy it. Farmers needed those large tracts so they could grow enough crops and livestock to feed their families and were reluctant to sell. When news of land becoming available south and west as Native Americans were being driven away, it was an enticing lure to leave home and start a new life somewhere else. This is where the saying “Go West Young Man” sprang from.

North Carolina also experienced the War of the Regulation and the American Revolutionary War which may have caused some Allreds to leave home to find calmer, more peaceful land.

Religious Freedom could have entered into the decision to leave home. When Sandy Creek Baptist Church, home church of the York family in Randolph County, split and many parishioners left, it may be some Allreds traveled with them. Many of you already know some Allreds who had already left North Carolina converted to the Mormon faith and traveled west, enduring Religious Persecution, to settle Utah.

Today Allreds live all across the United States with some states containing large clusters depicted by the red stars on the map below.
