Tracing An Allred Family Tree

by Linda Allred Cooper

Amy Allred contacted me asking about her family tree. She wanted to trace it back as far as possible but had no idea how to do it and needed some help. I thought this would be a great example to show how to get started with your genealogy research.

First, a word of caution about the family trees posted on Ancestry.com or other Web sites. Take the information as clues, but never take it as fact unless original documentation is included to prove the information is accurate. For example, the first tree I looked at on Ancestry.com for Alfred Floyd Allred stated he had been born in Scotland, Fentress, Alabama.

There is a community called Scotland in the northern section of Monroe County, Alabama - but there is no Fentress County in Alabama. There is a Fentress County in Tennessee where some Allreds lived/live. This is an example of someone seeing info that looks great, copying it without checking to see if it is accurate or not and posting it online.

Amy knew the names and approximate birthdates of her father, grandfather and great grandfather, but little else. I found Amy's grandfather, Wayne, as a small child living with his parents per the:

1930 Federal Census for Comanche, Stevens County, Oklahoma, pg 30:

Allred, Cecil D., age 22

Nettie, age 21

Wayne J., age 2 and 11 months

Per this listing, his parents, Cecil and Nettie were born in Texas, Wayne was born in Oklahoma. Ten years earlier, Cecil D. was 11 years old and living with his parents and siblings:

1920 Federal Census for Price, Jefferson County, Oklahoma, pg 3:

Malissa B., age 44

John A., age 17

Henry F., age 15

Clyde J., age 13

Cecil D., age 11

Rufus B., age 8

Herman, age 5

Per this census listing, Thomas was born in Alabama, Malissa in Texas and Cecil was born in Texas. Moving back in time 10 years, we find Cecil D. as a toddler in 1920:

This is an excellent example of why you should never trust transcriptions. Ancestry transcribed T.F. as F. H and transcribed the fourth child, Tamy, as Tiny. Always go to the original and transcribe for yourself.

Moving 10 more years back in time, before Cecil was born, we find his father Thomas F. Allred and a different wife with their children. Now we have documentation that Thomas was married at least twice. But, note the age of this wife, Landers. She was only 18 years old, she obviously was not the mother of the older children in this family. This tells us Thomas must have had three wives, first wife and mother of the older children on the 1900 census, second wife was Landers, and third wife was Malissa who was Cecil's mother.

mother of the youngest two, Clarence and Vinnie. I hope she was not the mother of Bertha - she would have been only 13 when Bertha was born. Possible, true, but I hope she was not the mother. Also note, listed on the same page was Nathan Allred and family. Is this a brother?

Most of the 1880 census was destroyed in a fire in 1977. I did not find the family on the 1870 Census. I skipped back to the 1860 census and found:

Why was Thomas living with the widow Elizabeth Gunter? Per the book, Thomas Allred Jr. Family, written by Dewel Lott (page v.): "Elizabeth Barnes married John Gunter in 1828. John Gunter died about 1847, so Elizabeth was a widow and Head of Household on the 1850 census. The relationship between Elizabeth Barnes Gunter and Thomas Allred Jr. is not known."

Thus we have traced Amy Allred's family tree back to the man known as Thomas Jr.

Thoughts for Dewel Lott

Lineage: Dewel, Lanny Jane, William M., Andrew Jr., Andrew, Thomas Jr.

The man we have come to know as Thomas Allred, Jr. (1771-1858) moved around quite a bit. Family tradition says he was born in Randolph County, North Carolina. Documentation shows he married Margaret Alldredge, then moved his bride to Tennessee where all six of their children were born. By 1818, the family was living in Blount County, Alabama. Thomas Jr. traveled back and forth between Alabama and Tennessee his entire adult life, finally dying in Knox County, Tennessee. He is buried in Glenwood Baptist Church's Cemetery, located just north of Knox ville.

One of his descendants, Dewel Lott, spent many years researching the genealogies and family histories of this branch of the Allred family. He compiled it into the book The Family of Thomas Allred, Jr.. Fully indexed and full of names and dates, the book also contains photos and transcripts of census, court and land records along with family letters used to document the genealogies. The book is truly a labor of love and an invaluable collection.

Dewel is 84 now and word has come to us that his health is failing. We want to send our thoughts and prayers to him and his family and wish him well in the coming weeks, months and years.

by Linda Allred Cooper

The man called Thomas Jr. never used "Jr." in any correspondence or court documents. After years of research, I THINK "Jr." originated in the book, The Allred Family in America, by Dr. Rulon C. Allred. No one knows why Dr. Allred chose to call Thomas "Jr.". My guess is that he figured Thomas must be the son of Thomas Allred who died 1809 in Randolph County, North Carolina, so just called him "Jr."

Thomas "Jr." died in Knox County, Tennessee, and is buried in Glenwood Cemetery.

It seems that Thomas traveled back and forth between his home in Blount County, Alabama, where most of his children settled and Knox County, Tennessee, where his youngest daughter (per circumstantial evidence) lived, Sylvania Allred Wood.

So, who was Thomas Allred "Jr." and where did he come from? The search turns to Anderson County, Tennessee. Anderson County was created November 6, 1801, carved from portions of Knox and Grainger Counties. After the County was organized, the Court ordered that a tax for the year 1802 be levied on all taxable property. Two Allreds were listed on this 1802 Tax List in Captain McCamey's Company (District): Thomas Allred and Solomon Allred, one white poll each. A White Poll was defined as "all free males and male servants between age of twenty one and fifty years." Also listed was Nathan Aldridge.

Per the 1850 Federal Census for Anderson County, Tennessee, page 16

Allred, Solomon, age 78 Mary, age 74

Note Solomon was two years older than the man known as Thomas Jr. per the 1850 Census. Who was this Solomon Allred? The evidence below shows he was the brother of the man known as Thomas Allred "Jr".

Thomas Allred married Margaret Alldredge about 1794 in Randolph County, North Carolina.
Solomon married Mary Aldridge. Mary and Margaret were the daughters of Nathan and Hannah York Alldredge. Note Nathan Aldridge was listed on the 1802 Anderson County, Tennessee, Tax List, living in the same Tax District as Thomas and Solomon Allred. (Yes, I know, the surname Alldredge/Aldridge is spelled all sorts of ways by clerks and census takers. It is all very confusing.)

Anderson County was carved from Knox County, Tennessee where Thomas "Jr." was buried. Between 1847 – 1856, members of Solomon and Mary Allred and some of their children exchanged letters full of family information. Thankfully some of these letters have survived and wound up in the hands of Allred descendant Sarah Lehman who passed copies along to me. Some of these copies are posted online at the AFO web site (http://www.allredfamily.com/ala-tnletters.htm).

On April 19, 1847, Solomon Allred of Anderson County, Tennessee, wrote a letter to John and Isaac Key of Blount County, Alabama. In this letter, Solomon wrote:

"I will inform you that old Uncle Thomas Allred's son, James, is dead and we cannot account for his death unless he took a fit and fell on the end of a log that lay near him and I suppose that he went out and staid so long that his wife became so uneasy that she went out to hunt for him and I suppose that she found him lying on his breast dead."

On April 27, 1849, Isaac Allred was living in Green County, Missouri, and wrote a letter to his father, Solomon Allred of Anderson County, Tennessee. In this letter, Isaac wrote:

"Jesse L. Allred is now at my house, he is the youngest son of Elias Allred Sen, from Randolph County, North Carolina, he came here last February from Indiana. He is repairing clocks and watches. His grandfather's name was Thomas Allred, your uncle."

"Old Uncle Thomas" referred to is Thomas Allred who died 1809 in Randolph County, North Carolina. Thomas named his children in his will. including sons Elias and James. When Thomas first showed up in North Carolina records in 1755, he was living on land owned by John Allred and bordered by Solomon Allred. This Solomon Allred sold his land in 1771 and moved south to Richmond County, North Carolina where he died in 1782. Based on Richmond County land records following Solomon's death, he had several sons including one named Solomon.

Based on this evidence, I believe this younger Solomon, son or maybe grandson of the Solomon who died 1782, is the same man who showed up in Anderson County, Tennessee, living near his brother, Thomas Allred, and father-in-law, Nathan Alldridge. But was he a son of Solomon, or grandson? That is the next big question! "Old Uncle Thomas" could have been an Uncle or a Grand Uncle. Either way, the Thomas Allred known as Thomas Jr. was not a Junior after all.

Thomas was the son of Solomon Allred originally of Randolph County and nephew or grand nephew of Thomas Allred who died 1809.

Obama at ElectraTherm Company Was Co-founded by Allred Descendant

President Barack Obama visited and spoke at a company co-founded in 2005 by Allred Family Organization member, Bill Olson. ElectraTherm's Green Machine is the world's first commercially viable Waste Heat Generator (WHG), using patented heat and pressure recovery technology that requires minimal heat (about 200° Fliquid) and is low cost, fuel-free and emissions-free. The president spoke at the company in Reno, Nevada, and held a town meeting at the company.

The ElectraTherm Heat to Power Generation System captures waste heat from almost any geothermal or industrial source to generate fuel-free, emission-free electricity. Built on a skid, it's both modular and mobile. Automated control systems

Per research done by Dawnell Griffin, Isaac Allread was the son of John and Lillie Ann (nee Julian) Allred of Randolph and Richmond Counties, North Carolina. John was the son of John Allred who first showed up in North Carolina land records in 1755 and died in Randolph County, NC, 1792.

S. W. Allread, farmer and merchant; P.O. Delisle; was the son of Isaac and Lucy Allread. His father, Isaac, was born in Maryland and moved with his parents to North Carolina where he remained till he came to Butler County [Ohio] when he was 18 years of age. Isaac was in the War of 1812 and served all through it and then returned safely home. Lucy (Emerson), Isaac's wife, was born in the State of Vermont and came with her parents to Butler County, Ohio, when 9 years of age. They were united in marriage in 1816 and raised seven children: four boys and three girls.

Mr. S. W. Allread, the subject of this sketch, was the eldest of his father's family. He left home when 11 years of age and worked at various places until 16 years of age when his father bound him out to Captain Samuel Dick, till 21 years of age, in Butler County, Ohio, where he lived till he became of age, then worked for him two years longer for wages. He then worked here and there and rented farms till he was 27 years of age, which was in 1843 when he united in marriage with Martha Ann Van Lieu, who was born and raised in Butler County.

They followed farming in that county for twelve years, or till 1855 when they moved to Darke County, Van Buren Township, where he still followed the life of a farmer for four years. He entered into the mercantile trade which, together with farming, he has followed to the present time. He has bought and sold several farms and by these transactions made considerable money. He is now the owner of 87 acres of good land in Delisle where he now lives.

He is associated in the mercantile trade in Delisle with W. Reed, and is also carrying on an extensive trade in buying and shipping grain. Allread is now 63 years of age with good health; the father of nine children, seven are still living: Isaac F., Elvira, Oliver M., George D., Amanda, John E. and Tabitha J.

Five are married and two, single, live at home. Mr. Allread has taken quite an active part in political matters being a staunch Democrat and having held several offices of trust; as Township Trustee, Assessor and Treasurer and in the County has been Infirmary Director for six years, thus showing that he has the confidence of the community.

Civil War Commemoration

The Civil War, 1861--1865, will be commemorated in a variety of ways over the next four years. There are records in the National Archives in Washington, D.C., that 386 Allreds or five other derivations of the name served on either the Confederate or Union side during the War Between the States during this war.

Allreds who served are listed is Issue No. 60, Fall of 2004, pages 415.

Below is the first of articles, we hope to have in the newsletter. If you have information on ancestors who served either side, please forward to Alice Allred Pottmyer, 5540 32nd St. North, Arlington VA 22207 or pottmyera@aol.com.

Allred descendant, Terry Routh, was one of the Confederate Reenactors who participated in the Firing on Ft. Sumter on Saturday, April 9, 2011. (The actual anniversary was April 12th, but the reenactment activities took place Saturday.)

Per the Web site: thismightyscourge.com/.../fort-sumter-is-fired-on-150th-anniversary/

"This event is the first large scale military operation that would officially launch the American Civil War. The firing was precipitated by Abraham Lincoln's announcement, to South Carolina Governor Francis W. Pickens, that he was going to send in "supplies only" to the beleaguered garrison commanded by US Major Robert Anderson. CSA Brigadier General P.G.T. Beauregard, commander of the Rebel forces at Charleston, demanded the immediate evacuation of the fort. Major Anderson refused to evacuate.

At 4:30 a.m., on April 12, 1861, Beauregard ordered his heavy artillery to begin the bombardment of the Federal fortress. The first shot was from a heavy 10-inch mortar which exploded over the fort. This shot signaled the general artillery bombardment to begin.

For the next 30 plus hours the Confederate artillery would pound the fort. The masonry walls were not designed to withstand the force of the large seacoast guns and their power quickly began to cause significant damage. Anderson's gunners did respond, but they were overpowered and low on ordnance. He would be forced to evacuate the fort at 2:30 p.m. on April 14 after agreeing to a truce the previous afternoon. The fort had sustained the bombardment, of over 3,000 shells, with no fatalities.

Based on the evacuation agreement Anderson was able to fire a 100 gun salute to the United States flag. During this peaceable activity, two Federal soldiers would be killed – the first casualties of the Civil War."

On reenactment day, the City of Charleston would not allow the reenacters to fire at 4:30 am. They opened fire about 7 am and continued until 8:15 pm.

Terry's crew, Striblings Battery, was stationed near Sullivan's Island very near to Fort Sumter.

British Allred Research

by Alice Allred Pottmyer

Have you wondered why our Allred researchers have not been able to document our family much beyond the 1600s? As the state church, the Church of England, began keeping christening, marriage and death records in 1538. Through the efforts of Thomas Cromwell, the mandate was issued to keep parish records. However, until the reign of Queen Elizabeth I (1558-1603), only the name of the child being christened was listed and the date. During the reign of Elizabeth I, the requirement was added that in addition to the name of the child, the father must be listed. In took a few years before this happened. However, the clerks at St. Mary Church in Leigh, Lancashire County, England, were not recording additional family information. Some researchers are able to find other documents such as wills that lead researchers to document family members.

The documents on the next pages indicate the reason why genealogists tear their hair.

Nellie Allred Noel, 89, of Sophia, North Carolina, died November 27, 2010, at Randolph Hospital, Asheboro. She was born May 24, 1921. She was the youngest of the six children of Eugene and Lydia C. Kinney Allred. Mrs. Noel was a native of Randleman and retired from Nixon-Reynolds Hosiery Mill. She was a member of Randleman Friends Meeting. Nellie was preceded in death by her parents, husband; Grant Noel, brothers and sisters; Herman Allred, Clifford Allred, Clyde Allred, Vivian Allred Nelson and William "Bill" Allred. A graveside service was held December 4, 2010, at Randolph Memorial Park Mausoleum with Rev. Wade Craven officiating. Nellie, Eugene, Jefferson Monroe, Elias S., Thomas, Eli, Thomas. Enid W. Allred, 91, of Afton, Wyoming, died December 7, 2010, at his home in the Star Valley Care Center. He was born May 7, 1919, to Elden Pratt Allred and Amy Leola White-Allred in Fairview, Wyoming. Enid was the second child in the line of seven children. He grew up in Fairview and lived most of his life in Star Valley. In 1941, he was married to his first wife, Velma Fern Erickson, who was the mother of his nine children. Being a good, old-fashioned American man, Enid loved being a cowboy. Blue skies and open plains were a lingering dream. He raised beef cattle and ran a small dairy farm all of his life in Star Valley. He was the herdsman for the Spring Creek Cattle Association for 28 years. Through herding, he could express his love for anything and everything that had to do with horses, including riding, breaking, pulling, trading, packing, branding and doctoring. He was truly one of the last real cowboys. His wife, Fern, died in October 1970. He later married Dorothy Nelson in November 1971. During his second marriage, he continued ranching in Star Valley until he and Dorothy made the decision to move to Idaho in summer 1979. While in Idaho, they embarked on a venture and became involved in the real-estate world. They received broker's licenses and eventually opened their own company, Gemstate Realty. Missing the cowboy world, Enid turned to being a cowboy poet and enjoyed writing about his life experiences and feelings about his beloved pastimes. He went to several cowboy poet gatherings to share his talent with other enthusiasts in the art. In 1992, while at a gathering in Salmon, Idaho, he suffered a major stroke while reciting one of his poems, taking out the podium as he went down. Ironically enough, the audience was so moved by his presentation that he received a standing ovation for his piece. In 2007, Enid moved from his home in Idaho Falls to the Star Valley Care Center in Afton. He is survived by six children, four stepchildren, 34 grandchildren, 66 great-grandchildren and 36 great-greatgrandchildren. He was preceded in death by his first wife, Fern; his parents; and three of his children. Enid W., Elden Pratt, Orson Pratt, William Moore, Isaac, William, Thomas.

President's Message

The months of April and May brought many storms across the United States moving from West to East and Rome, Georgia, was no exception. Floyd County, Georgia, and neighboring Cherokee County, Alabama, were hit by three tornados in one day. Over four hundred houses were damaged or destroyed but we escaped with only one injury and no fatalities.

My driveway was blocked with down trees, power lines and telephone cables. With the help of my son and grandson we removed the trees but I was without services for nine days.

All this made me reflect on times many years ago when electricity was a luxury and telephones and the internet didn't exist. My grandfather told me about the time their bathroom caught fire. He said, "I'm just thankful it didn't spread to the house."
